IV. Moving Forward

Questions to Consider

- Are these wahi pana significant? If so, what makes them significant? Are there other elements that make them significant that are not reflected in the Study?
- Are these wahi pana, and their mo'olelo, important to you for retaining or transmitting traditional knowledge, beliefs, or practices relating to Native Hawaiian culture?
- Is there a relationship between the story and a specific site? What is that relationship? Can the specific site be identified?
- Does the current physical condition of a location affect its importance to you?
- Do any of the named places identified without stories have an oral tradition? What is that story?
- Does the Project affect these wahi pana? How and in what way?
