I'm concerned that an agenda of some of the group is to get a comitment for zoning changes and programs (like Main Street) they would like that are only marginally related to the project impact but they would never get approved through the regular political process. They feel they have a lever to use against the City now. They may be well intentioned but this is not the forum to get these things done, there needs to be larger public debate as the political process allows. It's inappropriate for them to use this forum to avoid that debate.

I think it would be a good idea to stay away from NEPA and alternatives analysis as much as possible; according to the paper, we are supposed to identify alternatives "suitable for discussion." Let's focus on alternatives that avoid or minimize adverse effects to historic resources (that's what this exercise is all about), while respecting the outcome of proceedings, consultations, and public processes undertaken to date; thus, we're speaking of more subtle "adjustments," not wholesale changes or scraping the project. Sound O.K?

We should address the issue of alternatives straight away.
Alternatives analysis is over.
The local officials have selected an LPA.
Further discussion on other alternatives is not helpful to completing the PA process.
