So, if we do find mass burials in the alignment we can get the kibosh even without having the OBIC as a signatory.

Per state law, For previously identified remains, OIBC has sole authority to determine how they are to be treated. For inadvertant discovery, that rests with SHPD.

What does the local law say about OIBC's responsibilites regarding removal and re-internment; the ability of OIBC to stop development if it does not want burials disturbed?
Where does the SHPD fit in to burial administration?

I'd this helps, OIBC has authority defined by law. Not specific authority beyond the law and defined in PA. PA does not take away legal authority.
